

Natalie Aloï

Natalie Aloï joined the Ohio Journal of Science as an Assistant Copy Editor in 2024 and is currently an English PhD student at The Ohio State University in the Writing, Rhetoric, and Literacy program. Having received her MSc in Molecular, Developmental, and Cellular Biology from OSU in 2023, Natalie is excited to bring her love of science and writing together in her work with the Ohio Journal of Science, as well as in her other academic pursuits. Her current research centers around the teaching of writing in STEM education and the use of rhetorical strategies to convey scientific findings and limitations in biomedical and medical fields.